See your I Said Yes diary in your calendar

Your weddings, meetings and due dates show up in the calendar you already look at.

Your diary has its own private feed address, in Settings under Calendar feed. Subscribe to it once and your meetings, site visits and other entries, with the due dates of tasks and payments across your weddings, appear in the calendar you already use. It is read-only: change things in I Said Yes and your calendar catches up. Anyone with the address can read your diary, so keep it to yourself.

Follow the steps for what you use: Google Calendar · Apple Calendar · Outlook.

Google Calendar

1. Copy your feed address from Settings, under Calendar feed, as Your feed link. Keep it to yourself: anyone with it can read your diary.

2. Open Google Calendar on a computer. Beside Other calendars, press +, then From URL.
3. Paste your address and press Add calendar.
4. Your diary appears under Other calendars. Google checks it for changes every few hours, so something new can take a while to show.

Apple Calendar

1. Copy your feed address from Settings, under Calendar feed, as Your feed link. Keep it to yourself: anyone with it can read your diary.
2. On a Mac, open Calendar and choose File, then New Calendar Subscription.
3. Paste your address and press Subscribe.
4. Set Auto-refresh to every hour and Location to iCloud, so it shows on your iPhone too, then press OK.

Outlook

1. Copy your feed address from Settings, under Calendar feed, as Your feed link. Keep it to yourself: anyone with it can read your diary.
2. In Outlook on the web or the new Outlook, open your calendar and press Add calendar.
3. Choose Subscribe from web, paste your address, name it I Said Yes and press Import.
4. It appears with your other calendars. Outlook checks it for changes every few hours.
